Leonardo Project in LINK

ITALY

the project

Link offers a variety of activities, from sports, to media, to working with children in the local schools.

In the sports project, you will be working in a sports centre with young children, coaching them in sports such as football, basketball and volleyball. You will help to organize the sessions and also to run them.

In the school project you will help staff to organise arts and historic workshops. This will mean creation of materials, arts and crafts and working on the workshops with the children.

Link also runs a weekly radio show on a local community radio station, radio Regio. Here you will work with other volunteers to create a one hour radio show. You will plan and run it with the volunteers.

Link also have projects around working with disability, running artistic workshops with adults with learning and physical disabilities.

the project place Altamura

Altamura is a town having 60,000 inhabitants, situated between Bari and Matera and is one of the biggest towns of the Puglia region. It's a quite prosperous town thanks to furniture factories and for this reason there is little unemployment. Young people join the labour market and they neglect other experiences such as intercultural learning or formal and non-formal education. Cultural life is quite interesting thanks to a few cultural associations and Altamura has many environmental and historical goods. There is a well maintained historical town with a Cathedral from the XIII Century.
